STABLES FOR '25

1

Following Japan's attack on Pearl Harbor in 1941, former president Franklin D. Roosevelt ordered the confinement of Japanese Americans in internment camps without due process. This lamentable decision exacted great physical, psychological, and financial costs on internees. One of the most well preserved of ten such camps is Manzanar National Historic Site, where about 10,000 Japanese Americans were incarcerated in these so-called "War Relocation Centers."

SMILING PEANUT

CHECK-IN LOCATION:

The Smiling Peanut statue is located at 120 Buena Vista Rd., Plains, GA 31780 (Note: Ride Planner may not recognize this address, so use 400 Buena Vista Rd. and go north 3/10th of a mile to the statue.)

2

The Smiling Peanut statue, placed in Plains, Georgia during Jimmy Carter's 1976 presidential campaign, honors both Carter and the region's peanut-growing industry. At 13 feet tall, the statue is said to be the second-largest peanut in the world; the largest is in nearby Ashburn, GA. The former president reportedly never warmed to the statue, feeling its toothy grin was overly exaggerated. Nonetheless, the Smiling Peanut is one of the most photographed attractions in Carter's hometown.

3

BLACKFOOT, ID

POTATO CAPITAL OF THE WORLD

CHECK-IN LOCATION:

Check in at the giant potato statue and sign in front of the Idaho Potato Museum: 130 NW Main St., Blackfoot, ID 83221

Blackfoot, Idaho calls itself "The Potato Capital of the World," and Bingham County, where Blackfoot is located, annually produces more than 57,000 acres of the tasty tuber across its 1,177 farms. While China is in fact the top potato-producing country in the world, Bingham County holds the honor of being the largest potato-producing region in Idaho, making it the epicenter of a veritable potato paradise. The Idaho potato, in all its glory, is celebrated at the Idaho Potato Museum in Blackfoot. The museum, housed in a historic railroad depot, offers exhibits on the history of the potato, a potato cinema, a café serving all things potato, and more. It's everything you wanted to know about potatoes but were always too afraid to ask.

You'd probably consider Milwaukee, WI – the home of Harley-Davidson – to be the "hog" capital of the world, but the folks of Kewanee, IL beg to differ. After all, the city was officially designated as the "Hog Capital of the World" by the Illinois state legislature in 1949, right after Kewanee was named the nation's leading hog producer by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Each year on Labor Day weekend, the city sponsors Kewanee Hog Days, a festival that celebrates the savory swine, where you can chow down at "the world's largest outdoor pork barbecue."

Unlike the biblical version, Hell, MI is a pleasantly charming place. The unincorporated Michigan township, about 20 miles northwest of Ann Arbor, was settled in 1838 by George Reeves. The origin of the community's name is unknown, but one popular story holds that when Reeves was asked the name of his settlement, he replied "You can name it Hell for all I care."

You probably won't want to spend an eternity in Hell, but you may want to pick up a souvenir or two while you're there. We don't recommend waiting 'til hell freezes over before visiting the town; winters in Michigan can be quite biting.

Lynyrd Skynyrd, the legendary Southern rock band known for hit songs such as "Sweet Home Alabama" and "Free Bird," suffered a great tragedy on October 20, 1977, when their charter plane crashed in Magnolia, MS, taking the lives of three band members, their assistant road manager, and the aircraft's pilot and first officer. Twenty others survived the crash, caused by a lack of fuel. After a ten-year hiatus, the band re-formed in 1987, with Johnny Van Zant as the lead singer, replacing his brother Ronnie who perished in the crash. The band was inducted into the Rock & Roll Hall of Fame in 2006, and maintains an active tour schedule to this day. In 2009, 42 years after the tragedy, a seven-ton granite monument was dedicated at the crash site.

WORLD'S LARGEST
BUFFALO STATUE

CHECK-IN LOCATION:
Located within Frontier Village is the World's Largest Buffalo Monument: 404 Louis Lamour Ln., Jamestown, ND 58401

In the early days of the American West, the thunder of tens of millions of buffalo reverberated through the plains. By the end of the nineteenth century, only several hundred of the giant beasts remained in the wild, decimated by the arrival of the transcontinental railroad and indiscriminate hunting. Today, a 60-ton, 26-foot-tall concrete statue known as the "World's Largest Buffalo Monument" sits atop a bluff overlooking Jamestown, ND. Created in 1959 by sculptor Elmer Petersen and later christened "Dakota Thunder," the behemoth bovine pays tribute to the American bison.

The National Memorial Arch in Valley Forge National Historical Park commemorates the arrival of General George Washington and the Continental Army into Valley Forge during the Revolutionary War. Dedicated in 1917, the 61-foot-tall granite arch was modeled after the classical Roman Arch of Titus in Rome, erected in the first century A.D. The original proposal called for two arches to serve as entrance gates on either end of the park, but the plans were later modified, and in 1910 Congress approved the construction of a single arch at a cost of $100,000.

South of the Border in Hamer, South Carolina is a throwback to the golden age of motoring, when kitsch was king and tacky roadside attractions battled for attention (and tourism dollars) from passing motorists. Founded in 1949 as "South of the Border Beer Depot" by Alan Schafer, the business attracted throngs of thirsty travelers who had driven south through neighboring North Carolina's dry counties. An astute businessman, Schafer added a restaurant, motel, campground, souvenir shop, gas station, amusement park, reptile lagoon, and much more over the years.

Founded in 1890 and placed on the Arkansas Register of Historic Places in 1995, its rustic interior features original wood floors and ceiling. CHECK-IN LOCATION:

Your photo should include all or part of the Narrows Bridge on Chocorua Lake Rd., Tamworth, NH 03886 (near the intersection of Chocorua Mountain Hwy. [NH State Route 16] and Chocorua Lake Rd.)

12

Overlooking Mount Chocorua in New Hampshire's White Mountains, the Narrows Bridge is situated amidst almost 1,000 acres of pristine woodland and lake basin protected by the Chocorua Lake Conservancy. The picturesque cedar-railed bridge, first constructed in 1802 and rebuilt many times over the years, sits between Chocorua and Little Lakes. For Harley-Davidson Pan America riders, Chocorua Lake lies along the North East Backcountry Discovery Route (BDR), running 1,300 miles through seven states.

The World's Largest Teapot began its life in Pennsylvania in the early 1900s as a giant wooden keg, created as an advertisement for Hires Root Beer. The 14-foot-tall barrel was later sold to an entrepreneur named William Devon, who in 1938 moved it to Chester, WV and added a lid, spout, and handle, transforming it into a giant teapot. Devon placed it outside of his pottery store as an attention-getter and sold snacks and souvenirs from within. The teapot fell into disrepair over the years, until in 1990 the city of Chester raised funds for its restoration and moved it to its current location.

CHECK-IN LOCATION:

In your photo, include all or part of Bishop Castle: 12705 State Route 165, Rye, CO 81069

In 1959, fifteen-year-old Jim Bishop bought a 2.5-acre parcel of land bordering the San Isabel National Forest in central Colorado for $450. Ten years later, he started construction on a one-room stone cabin, but without plans or blueprints, his "cabin" slowly grew into a castle. Over the next 44 years, he added turrets, stained-glass windows, wrought-iron railings and walkways, and a stainless-steel, fire-breathing dragon. The equivalent of 16 stories tall, Bishop's unique self-built fortress has become a popular tourist attraction, drawing an estimated 200,000 annual visitors.

Currently 81 years old and in fragile health, Jim Bishop is retired from castle building, and his son Daniel manages the property. Open to the public, visitors are welcome to explore the structure; admission is free, but donations are accepted.

Among the many iconic destinations in the Black Hills, Mount Rushmore is incomparable. Completed in 1941, the sculpture's 60-foot-tall granite faces depict former presidents George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Theodore Roosevelt, and Abraham Lincoln; the chosen presidents represent the birth, growth, development, and preservation of America. The monument was designed by sculptor Gutzon Borglum and named "Shrine of Democracy," and now it attracts more than two million visitors annually.
